In the early days of Social Security many people, especially in the south, were faced with a major problem. They had no birth certificate. In order to collect benefits they needed some sort of proof of their birth. There was a mad rush to the court houses to apply for delayed certificates.

In some cases they were asked to provide not only the names of their parents but the ages of same when the applicant was born. Many of the forms show the place of birth of the parents. These old files are a treasure trove for family genealogists, both black and white, as the forms required a declaration of race as well.

To this has been added data from old voters registration cards which contain varying amounts of information from birth date to parents names.

The following records are taken from applications for delayed birth certificates filed in the Calhoun County Court House. The applications have been abstracted through the year 1910.
